

Wikis

A wiki page allows student to create a web page. This may be an individual student project or a collaborative page where students share resources and/or edit an assignment. Students are prompted to Create a page for an individual Wiki. Students may create links to additional pages. This tip sheet review how to create a wiki as an individual or a group endeavor.

Fact versus Opinion

Fact is something which exists independently of what we think of it.

Opinions come from perceptions and beliefs.

Perception is what arrives to our consciousness, through the various filters of our sensory organs, interpretation, liking, etc. Belief is how we imagine things are.

The History tab allows us to monitor student activity. We are able to see all the students who contributed listed with the date and time of their modifications. The Version column allows one to see the step-by-step progression of the wiki. If I select 1 in the column Version, I see what Moodle profile Joan Wall contributed. If I select 2 in the same column, I see what test student KJ added/changed.

The Compare selected button (bottom right) is the most practical way to assess a student's contribution. Select the contribution to differentiate in the first column Diff. Below is a picture showing the contributions of student KJ and Student SI; versions 2 and 3 respectively.
